We are Northern California's leading toxic chemical and environmental pollution law firm with more experience than anyone in toxic chemical cases.

Well water contaminated with perchlorate is a health hazard for which the Olin Corporation should provide regular medical monitoring for you, your family and your animals. In addition, homes and businesses on polluted land suffer a loss of value from the stigma of pollution, which won't disappear, even if Olin pays for you to be connected to a municipal water system.

Under California law, all realtors and sellers must disclose ground water pollution. If a potential buyer has a choice between purchasing your property or an equivalent property outside the perchlorate plume, the choice is simple. The stigma of pollution can dramatically impact the value of your property whether selling or refinancing.

The State of California recently lowered the acceptable level of perchlorate to 4 ppb. But as a practical matter that new level is meaningless unless you constantly monitor a well. With underground water pollution no one ever knows when or where it is going to migrate or worsen. My partner Mandy Hawes and I learned that from the Fairchild pollution case many years ago.

Open our public education website and read about how we made Allied Signal pay for polluting homes with arsenic in Sutter Creek, our clean up of Cambridge, Ohio, our work on behalf of hundreds of IBM workers exposed to dangerous chemicals, chemically caused birth defects and many serious toxic chemical injuries and deaths. See our reports on consumerlawpage.com and on www.alexanderlaw.com.

Open alexanderlaw.com to learn more about who we are and our success in toxic chemical and environmental pollution cases. Few come close to our record. Call the Silicon Valley Toxics Coalition, a recognized leader in toxic safety issues at 288.7882 and ask them about us.

Free consultations are available online or by calling 408.289.1776. We never charge anyone for discussing their options or providing information. All our work is on a contingency basis. No recovery: no fees, no costs. We guarantee that in writing.
